23. 다음 글에서 필자가 주장하는 바로 가장 적절한 것은?

If children were required to excel only in certain areas, they might be better able to cope with their parents' expectations. Psychologist Michael Thompson says that we make unfair "genetic" demands on our teens: "It is the only period in your life when you're expected to do all things well. Adults don't hold themselves to those standards. We don't interview the dentist about whether he can throw a basketball, or quiz our accountant on biology before we let her do our taxes. In elementary and high school we celebrate the generalist, but in the real world there is no room for the generalist except on a quiz show." We should not expect too much from our children.

"Why" questions can get you reasons, explanations and excuses. But they usually don't come up with useful and helpful information. Don't ask your kid why he is having trouble with his math. Ask him what he needs to do to perform better. There's no need to ask an employee why he didn't get a contract you were bidding for. Ask him how he can change so you'll be certain to get the next one. Good communicators aren't interested in the reason why something is going wrong. They want to find out how to do it right. The right questions will lead you in that direction, and finally solve the problems you are facing.

Food producers and restaurant chefs use higher levels of salt and fat to make their products taste better to the consumer. This in turn increases the possibility of weight gain and some diseases. Preparing meals at home can be the best option. It allows you to control the amount of salt and oils you use in your recipes. When it comes to feeding your body and mind, nothing is superior to preparing your food at home. In addition, including family members in meal preparation can be an opportunity to give and share love. When food is prepared with a calm mind and loving thoughts, it can become a vitamin for both the physical body and the soul.

Getting an “F” means only that you failed a test—not that you failed your life. From now on, imagine that the letter “F” when used as a grade ① represents the word: feedback. An “F” is an indication that you didn’t understand the material well enough. It’s a message that you should do something ② differently before the next test. If you think of “F” as feedback, you can change your thinking and behavior in ways that ③ prevent your success. You can choose a new learning strategy. Getting meaningful feedback on your performance is a powerful strategy for learning anything. Tests are not the only ④ source of feedback. 33. 다음 글에 드러난 ‘I’의 심경으로 가장 적절한 것은?

Not long after starting a new college life in a strange city, I slipped on the stairs and broke my right leg. I was really amazed, however, by the kindness shown by my new roommate. When she found me lying in my room with a swollen leg, unable to move, she took me to the student health center by cab. After that, she didn’t stop helping me—she made me amazing meals and made me comfortable despite my insistence that I could do things on my own. I was seriously touched by the kindness of everyone—the girl in the elevator, people on the bus, the doctors and nurses. So many blessings I never expected came my way.

34. No one else can experience the way your heart feels about things. No one can see through the lens you use to see life quite the same as you do. Accept this _____. Honor and praise it, too. Do not be quick to compromise it. In your desire to fit in or make others happy, you may be tempted to pretend to be someone you are not. You may even pretend to believe things you don’t really believe, or act in ways that are out of character with who you really are. When you do this, you lose out on the real you. The world loses out on you, too. Strive to be a healthy, happy and enlightened person—and then, taking your place alongside your fellow travelers, offer your self to the waiting world. [3점]

- ① similarity ② endurance ③ generosity

35. When you get into your new exercise routine, _____ is of great importance. If you’re sore while exercising, stop it immediately, as overuse will set you up for injuries such as muscle aches. If you are in a group fitness class, don’t always listen to the instructor or mimic what everyone else is doing. If you don’t feel comfortable with any part of the class, sit it out. This gives your muscles enough time to prepare for the stress it’s about to endure. Then, your body will thank you later by helping to prevent any possibility of an injury from occurring.

- ① proper rest
② good posture
③ a balanced diet
④ physical training
⑤ a continuing effort

36. One response that happens after a diagnosis of memory loss is the tendency to _____ when things do not go well. Here is a good example: Jane, a woman in her mid-sixties, recently got a call from her son, who asked her to get a bus pass for an upcoming doctor’s visit. A couple of days later, the son called and asked Jane if she had gotten the bus pass. She said, with some guilt, “Oh no, I’m sorry I forgot all about that.” Her son’s response was, “Well, Mom, I asked you to do that just two days ago.” Jane ended the conversation feeling upset at herself and telling herself she “shouldn’t” have forgotten what her son had asked. But her forgetfulness was not her fault. She could not control the memory loss. [3점]

My parents had gone shopping. As I stood alone in Mom and Dad's bedroom and my grandmother was napping in another part of the house, I noticed a box of matches on my Dad's bedside table. As I picked up the box, I could hear in my mind my father's voice saying as he had many times, "Don't play with matches!" Behind the table were lovely white curtains. I wondered what would happen if I struck a match and touched the curtain quickly. When I did it, a small hole appeared in the curtain. I was horrified and quickly hid the curtain behind the table. "Maybe they would never see it," I thought.

That night as I got in bed and pulled the covers over me, my stomach began to hurt. It got worse, and I wept. My father came to me and asked, "Son, what is the matter?" I said, "I have a bad stomachache." My father sat quietly by my side, and said, "Where does it hurt?" He put his hand on my chest and asked, "Does it feel like a burned curtain?" Then he said in a low voice, "Son, I think you have learned your lesson. I love you. Now get some sleep." At the moment, I realized that my father knew everything I had done, but he forgave me. My stomachache had stopped, and my _____ was gone. I never forgot my father's quiet words. His love and forgiveness cured my pain.
