You experience displeasure while using various types of products or services. You think determining liability for your displeasure is difficult and the amount of monetary loss is small. You also don't know where to go to handle the displeasure and where to receive compensation. However, you are eager to deal with these situations. This is where you can get help. It provides you with counseling and handles your complaints related to various fields such as automobiles, housing and facilities, publications, services, finance and insurance, law, and medicine. This also demands payment for you from a corporation based on the Compensation Criteria for Consumers' Damages.

Tom and his colleague, Sue, were attending a conference for music teachers in New York. While at the conference ① he purchased a talking metronome, a device for counting the beats in a song. Before Tom and Sue boarded their flight home, Tom put his carry-on bag on the security-check conveyor belt. The security guard's eyes widened as ② he watched the monitor. He asked Tom what ③ he had in the bag. Then the guard slowly pulled out of the bag the device covered with dials and switches. "It's a talking metronome," Tom insisted. "Look, I'll show you." ④ He took the box and flipped a switch. "One, two, three,....." said the metronome in perfect time. The guard breathed a sigh of relief. Sue whispered to Tom as ⑤ he gathered his belongings, "Aren't you glad it didn't go 'Three, two, one,.....'?"

I feel a little overwhelmed now by all the “new” in my life. New job. New apartment. New neighborhood. But the best “new” is a new perspective. I don’t have to tell you how desperate I was feeling. When things started to go from bad to worse, I almost felt numb. That is, until you came on the scene. I just can’t thank you enough for all the time you’ve spent with me. Calling everyone in your network to help me locate a new job here. Coaching me on the interview. The hours you’ve spent on my behalf seem like an incredible gift. Your love and concern feel like a warm blanket on those long nights as I adjust to my new life.

If properly stored, broccoli will stay fresh for up to four days. The best way to store fresh bunches (A)is / are to refrigerate them in an open plastic bag in the vegetable compartment, which will give them the right balance of humidity and air, and help preserve the vitamin C content. Don’t wash the broccoli before storing it since moisture on its surface (B)encourages / to encourage the growth of mold. However, like most vegetables, it is at its best condition when used within a day or two after the purchase. Preparing broccoli is extremely easy, so all you have to do is boil it in water just until it (C)is / will be tender, three to five minutes.

In business settings, it’s really easy to forget ① to take the time to say Thank-You, and yet, it’s an essential part of interaction with others. It’s important to people that they feel valid, important, and ② respected. Just as saying sorry matters, so does ③ remember to thank those who help you move forward. And I think it’s much nicer to send along a physical card than an email. A personal note written by your own hand matters ④ far more than a few lines of typing into a window that’s so easily available at your fingertips. One more thing: if you’re going to go this route, put in the extra few minutes to purchase a nice card and ⑤ use a pen that gives you a decent flow.

Ending your shower with cold water can be good for your health. ① Warm water makes the blood rush to your skin, and cool water makes the blood rush to your organs. ② This switching between hot and cold triggers better circulation by forcing the blood to move. ③ The ideal practice would be to switch numerous times between hot and cold water, but merely ending the shower with cold water does help with circulation. ④ Taking frequent showers in fact can cause skin problems and other infections. ⑤ Good circulation improves the performance of your system and thus makes you look and feel better.

24. One of the most important aspects of green products should be _____. If something is tough or can be readily repaired, this lessens the chance that it’ll end up in the landfill, and could easily save you money in the long run, even if it’s initially more expensive. Even recyclable materials, if they break and can’t be fixed, require energy and other resources to reprocess and then replace. Long-lasting goods can be passed on from person to person. Even if your style changes and that kitchen table isn’t your thing anymore, a good strong table will almost always be appealing to someone else, while a broken and unfixable one probably won’t.

- ① uniqueness                      ② cleanliness                      ③ mobility
- ④ durability                        ⑤ beauty

25. A new study suggests that kids might be at increased risk of getting the disease of the lungs depending on _____. Looking at more than 95,000 infants born from 1995 to 2000, researchers followed the children through 2005. What they found was those born in the autumn were nearly 30% more likely to get asthma. The researchers say it’s because babies born in the fall months are much more likely to get common wintertime infections. At birth, infants have protection against certain diseases because antibodies have passed from the mother to her unborn baby. But the protection is temporary. So, as their immunities fade, babies become more subject to infections, especially in the winter months when all kinds of germs are swirling through the air.

26. El Sistema, which is known as one of the most successful social inclusion projects, is a national network of youth orchestras and music centers in Venezuela. About three decades ago, José Antonio Abreu developed the idea of _____, in order to offer children from poor neighborhoods an alternative to life on the streets. In the dangerous and poverty-stricken slums of Caracas, Abreu lifted children out of despair through music, changing both people and the system of the society. In 1975 he established the first Venezuelan youth orchestra with 12 children. Since then he has built up a network of orchestras and music centers through the whole country. Currently 250,000 children and young adults are playing a musical instrument, and by 2012 these numbers will have doubled.

27. Much is now known about natural hazards and the negative impacts they have on people and their property. It would seem obvious that any logical person would avoid such potential impacts or at least modify their behavior or their property to minimize such impacts. However, _____. Until someone has a personal experience or knows someone who has such an experience, most people subconsciously believe “It won’t happen here” or “It won’t happen to me.” Even knowledgeable scientists who are aware of the hazards, the odds of their occurrence, and the costs of an event do not always act appropriately. [3점]

- ① humans are not always rational

Can you identify others’ personality from colors they like? Some psychologists actually use personality tests based on color (A) conference / preference. These color psychologists have generally thought that outgoing, adventurous, and competitive people like bold, bright colors. Conversely, people who like softer tones are more likely to exhibit a quieter, gentler nature. While there is some truth in such (B) assumptions / exceptions, you should remember that people from various backgrounds and experiences will be attracted to certain colors and be offended by others. Therefore, color psychology, although interesting, provides only broad (C) regulations / generalizations in analyzing personality types.

Years ago I saw a woman showing her magic powers. She filled a glass with water, then ① covered it with her handkerchief, previously dipped in water. She pushed down the center of the cloth, ② inverted the glass on her right palm, then seized it with her left hand. Air pressure ballooned the cloth ③ upward inside the glass. “When I put my finger on the glass,” she explained, “it will make the water boil.” When she did so, bubbles began ④ rising. You could even hear the surface bubbling! What happened was this. When she pushed with her finger, the glass slipped downward through her left hand, causing the handkerchief to slide upward on the outside. This ⑤ raised the center of the cloth inside, forming a vacuum. The vacuum drew air through the handkerchief and created an illusion of boiling water.

It is said that a cozy hat is a must on a cold winter’s day. We are often led to believe that most of our body heat is lost through our heads. Closer inspection of heat loss in the hatless, ____ (A) ____, reveals that is nonsense. The myth has arisen through a flawed interpretation of an experiment in the 1950s. In the study, volunteers were dressed in Arctic survival suits and exposed to bitterly cold conditions. Because the head was the only part of their bodies left uncovered, most of their heat was lost through their heads. ____ (B) ____, covering one part of the body has as much effect as covering any other. If the experiment had been performed with people wearing only swimming trunks, they would have lost no more than 10% of their body heat through their heads.

When I moved into a two-bedroom flat with Ally, I thought we could get on well. Initially, everything seemed fine. Then, as the weeks passed, things began to change. When I went out, she'd sneak into my room and read my journal. She would put on my clothes and cosmetics without my permission. Once, she took off all the framed photos of mine, which were very important to me, and hung a large frame of abstract painting instead. It was the last straw, however, when she started spreading rumors; she told my friends that I got addicted to computer games, which wasn't true. When I confronted her, she denied it. But I couldn't stand her any more.

32. Trust is the basis of all transactions. It's the basis of the economy. World Bank economist Stephen Knack has long studied the economics of trust. According to him, the huge disparity in income between the United States and Somalia can be explained entirely as a disparity in trust. Put differently, the income enjoyed by the American people is 0.5 percent the result of hard work and 99.5 percent the result of trust. While that sounds extreme, there's something to it if you consider how market transactions and business activities are impossible without it. Without adequate trust, the cost of transactions rises and there are even times when mutually beneficial transactions cannot be realized.

33. We think of butterfly wings as being colorful, but many are relatively drab on the underside. Some butterflies protect themselves through camouflage—by folding up their wings, they reveal the undersides and blend in with their surroundings. Through this strategy, they become nearly invisible to predators. Some other butterflies are brightly and distinctively colored, but they taste nasty. A bird that eats one of these butterflies remembers the experience—and avoids repeating it. Now other species of butterfly that do not taste nasty mimic the nasty ones. They are born looking like them in color and shape but not taste. Birds and lizards, who have learned to avoid bold warning coloration, leave these imitators alone.

These days, lots of young people are worried about their future because of the economic recession. More seriously, even experts can't predict what's going to happen in the near future. They just say the financial crisis won't be solved easily unlike the past. So, most young people, including recent graduates, have difficulty in getting jobs. Then, is there no way out? They should change direction! It's time for them to turn their eyes to the other side of the world. They don't necessarily have to realize their dreams home. Instead, they need to change their stage to perform on for their future. Of course, there are risks involved. However, they can't move forward if they are afraid of the risks.

The graph above shows Americans' ratings of their life today compared with their life five years ago. ① The percentage of people who said their life was better off was always higher than that of those who responded negatively. ② Especially, between 1994 and 2002, more than half the respondents answered they were better off than five years ago. ③ In 1990, the percentage of those who answered positively was nearly twice as high as that of those who answered negatively. ④ From 1990 to 1996, the gap between the rates of the two groups increased steadily. In 1996, the highest percentage of people had the positive view of their life. ⑤ However, the year 2008 showed that about two-thirds of the respondents had the negative view of their life.

36. FTF에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

The FTF is a trade association that promotes fair trade. The FTF traces its roots to the late 1970s when many individual trade organizations began holding yearly conferences on fair trade. In 1994, they incorporated formally as the NAATO and, the following year, changed its name to the FTF. It envisions a just and sustainable global economic system in which purchasing and production choices are made with concern for the well-being of people and the environment. It seeks to reduce poverty by continually and significantly expanding the practice of trade that values the labor and dignity of all people.

37. snowy plover에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

The snowy plover is one of the hardest birds to spot on the beach. Once numbering in the thousands, the species is listed as endangered in several states now. Beige and white, snowy plovers blend perfectly in the white sand. They eat tiny flies that live on the sand or mud flats. Their nests usually contain three tiny eggs, which look like sand and are barely visible to even the most well-trained eye. Mothers incubate the nests during the day and fathers at night. Chicks can get out of their nest within three hours of hatching. They walk, run, and swim well but still require their parents' care after hatching.

38. Did I remember to turn the stove off? Did I remember to lock the front door? I'd better look again. We all feel the need to check again sometimes, to reassure ourselves that we didn't neglect a possibly dangerous problem. But for some people, checking can consume hours every day, driven by intense fears of unlikely scenarios. A teacher continually searches the floor, obsessed with the idea that a dropped needle might injure her students. A man spends an hour every morning verifying that all the doors and windows are shut before he leaves for work. Yet this habit of checking doesn't solve the worry at all, doubt still grows, and if it gets worse, it can lead to medical treatment.

39. The saying, "To err is human, to forgive, divine," shows the ideal we should have: people should be forgiving of other's mistakes. To err or to make mistakes is indeed a part of being human but it seems that most people don't want to accept the responsibility for having made a mistake. Rather, they are likely to do the opposite – to find someone else to shift the blame to. They naturally look for someone else who could be responsible for the problem. So the twisted version of the saying "To err is human. To blame the other guy is more human." is meant to be a joke and yet it gives us more information about human nature.

41. Organizations like the National Audubon Society once encouraged interest in birds, and bird watching became a popular pastime and a favorite way to spend leisure time. Unfortunately, the growth of interest has affected the birds themselves. One rare bird can bring a flock of bird watchers. Both vegetation and nesting places have been trampled by feet of overenthusiastic bird watchers. Birds are naturally shy; the presence of too many people can cause them to abandon a nest and eggs in it. For example, a black hawk was so upset by the people gathering to see it return to its nest that it laid only one egg in its nest in five years. *trample 짓밟다

42. There is plenty of evidence that second-hand smoke – breathed when you are in the same room as someone smoking – can be harmful, particularly to children, and some parents adopt a strategy of never smoking in their child’s presence. According to a researcher, however, this would not offer complete protection because there can be third-hand smoke. Toxic particles in cigarette smoke can remain on nearby surfaces, as well as the hair and clothing of the smoker, long after the cigarette has been put out, and small children are easily influenced because they are likely to breathe in close proximity, or even lick and suck them. Therefore, it is vital that people are made aware of the possible risks associated with smoking on the health of children. *proximity 근접

It was dark outside, and rain fell in icy torrents. Inside, the three children sat around their grandfather, the only light in the room coming from an old lantern that sat on the rough, wooden table. The children were captivated by his every word as his low voice poured out tales of pirates, treasure and the sea. They were certain they could hear the sound of the rough wind hurling the surf against the rocks. Though it was cold and wet outside in their imaginations, inside it was warm and dry, and one by one the children’s eyes began to close. The study also suggests that luck is a matter of interpretation.

Successful people often say that “you make your own luck,” and the results from a study suggest that this is true. ( ① ) If people believe that they are lucky, then they are more likely to continue trying until they succeed at something. ( ② ) Those who think they are unlucky, on the other hand, do the opposite. ( ③ ) They rarely try something new because they “know” they will not win, and therefore they can never succeed. ( ④ ) When one of the subjects fell down the stairs and broke his arm, he did not think that this was unlucky. ( ⑤ ) On the contrary, he actually felt extremely fortunate – if he had fallen differently, he might have broken his neck.

Today, the common store of information and knowledge is more complex and more accessible. The accessibility of them through the Internet is now much more the domain of the young, the masters of the new cybernetic world. However, wisdom’s domain lies in another direction. Wisdom is not exclusively about information and knowledge, but about “context,” and in this arena the young must often still yield to the old. Why? Because when it comes to the essentials of living, it is clear we haven’t made as much progress since ancient times. Wisdom moves slowly because it takes a lifetime to acquire. In fact, it is the paradox of wisdom, that the faster we try to master it, the slower it comes to us. Wisdom mostly remains the domain of the elders, and the technology revolution has not diminished our need for them.

Though technology revolution allows the young to have _____ (A) _____ in knowledge and information, they should _____ (B) _____ the elders for wisdom.

(A) It was December 1972. I had been head football coach at Pennsylvania State University for almost seven years. Then that unexpected phone call had come. The man on the phone was Bill Sullivan, principal owner of the New England Patriots. “I want to meet with you to talk about coaching my team,” he said. (a) He hit me with his package – $1.3 million, plus part ownership of the franchise.

(B) From the moment of that nighttime revelation, I knew what college football means to me – and what pro football never could mean. I love winning games as much as any coach does, but I know there’s something that counts more than victory or defeat. (b) I get to watch my players grow – in their personal discipline, in their educational development, and as human beings. That is a deep, lasting reward that I could never get in pro ball.

(C) I pretended I was asleep. I lay there thinking about the life I was leaving. I saw the school where I had met my wife and got married, the only home our five kids had ever known. I saw my thick-necked, fragile-hearted football players. What had made me tell Sullivan I’d come? (c) Yes, Boston was a great city and it was a new challenge. But it was ... the money. Suddenly I knew what it was I had to do, what it was I wanted to do. In the morning, I told Sue, “You went to bed with a millionaire, but you woke up with me. I’m not going.”

(D) (d) Sullivan’s offer made me dizzy. In the end, I told my wife, “I have to take the job.” “Joe, whatever you want to do will be fine with me,” Sue replied. (e) I called Sullivan and told him we had a deal. When Sue and I went to bed that evening, I was pleased. At 2:00 a.m., Sue was sitting in her rocking chair nursing our baby. I’m sure she thought I was asleep. She had never said she didn’t want to go to Boston. But now tears were slipping down her face.

There is a famous psychology experiment to help us understand how opinions and judgements can be formed. The general experiment procedure was devised by Dr. Asch in the U.S. What happens is this: A volunteer is asked to join a group for the study of the discrimination of length. And he goes to a room where a number of people and the experimenter are seated. The volunteer doesn’t know that the other people in the room are researchers working together with the experimenter. A pair of cards is introduced. On one of them there is a line and on the other, three lines. Of these three, one is clearly longer than the line on the other card, one is shorter and one the same length. Seeing the cards, everyone is in turn asked which of the three lines on the second card is equal to the line on the first. They all pick – as they have been told to pick – the wrong line. Last of all, comes the turn of our volunteer. In many cases the volunteer, faced with the opinion of the group, denies the plain evidence of his senses and picks the same one as others do. This experiment shows even the sane and ordinary people could be made to deny the obvious facts, feeling the pressure to _____. The people around you, “the pressure group” can have a great influence on your judgement and decisions.
