This is one of the oldest structures in architectural history. The first kind of this was probably wood trunks fitted together, and was used to acquire strategic positions for survival. This was first used to overcome the difficulties presented by the terrain, such as valleys or mountains. People could move up as quickly as possible, which often meant moving to a place of greater security. A modern form of this is a mechanically moving device that carries people between floors of a large building, enabling them to move up or down without walking.

Her sick friend had been so ashamed to mention her internal problems to a man that ③ she hid her pain for too long. When she finally sought treatment, it was too late to save her life. Elizabeth couldn't get the dying woman's suggestion out of her mind. So ④ she decided to devote her life to medicine. In 1849 ⑤ she became the first woman in the United States to receive a medical degree.

Farmers plow more and more fields ① to produce more food for the increasing population. This increases pressure on our soil resources. Farmers plow soil to improve ② it for crops. They turn and loosen the soil, ③ leaving it in the best condition for farming. However, this process removes the important plant cover that holds soil particles in place, making soil ④ defenselessly to wind and water erosion. Sometimes, the wind blows soil from a plowed field. Soil erosion in many places occurs at a ⑤ much faster rate than the natural processes of weathering can replace it.

A noted scientist, Ellsworth Huntington, concluded from other men's work and his own involving people living in different climates, that climate and temperature have a definite effect on our mental abilities. He found that cool weather is much more favorable for creative thinking than hot weather. The mental abilities of large numbers of people tend to be lowest in the summer. Spring appears to be the best period of the year for thinking. One reason may be that in the spring man's mental abilities are affected by the same factors that bring about great changes in nature. Fall is the next best season, then winter. As for summer, it seems to be a good time to _____. [3점]

On draft day, I sat in my living room and watched the draft with my family. I thought I would be one of the players to get drafted in the first round. The first round concluded and I did not make it. I tried to keep a positive attitude about my situation. I thought I had a better chance of being drafted in the second round, still a great accomplishment. However, this round was quickly over, and before I knew it, we were halfway through the seventh round. I saw the puzzled look on my father's face. Instead, swim ④ straight to the beach. This will get you out of the strong outward current. If it's too hard to swim sideways while you're being dragged through the water, just wait until the current carries you past the ⑤ sandbar. The water will be much calmer there. Once you feel you are out of the current, turn and swim towards the shore.

32. When an eight-lane bridge across the Mississippi River collapsed, nearly one hundred and fifty people were killed and injured. In the wake of this disaster, there were calls to harness technology to avoid similar accidents. Thanks to strenuous work by engineers, bridge supports could contain a new kind of material that turns red before a structure collapses or falls apart. When we humans are injured, we bruise and our skin changes color. The changed color tells us where to apply the medicine. The new material is a similar detection method. The secret behind the color-changing material is a particular type of molecule. When one bond in the molecule breaks on impact, the rest of the molecule turns red. This material can allow damage to the structure to be easily spotted.

33. Have you heard the words “venomous” and “poisonous” in reference to animals? Black widow spiders are venomous animals while some frogs are poisonous. You can easily distinguish them if you understand how they use the toxins. Venomous animals store toxins internally and release them through biting or stinging, disabling whatever organism they bite or sting. Poisonous animals usually secrete toxins through their skin so that whatever creature bites or touches them is poisoned. The toxins have different uses. Venomous animals use toxins to help them capture prey. Poisonous animals use toxins to defend themselves. The one uses toxins to make dinner while the other uses toxins not to be dinner.

As a successful entrepreneur, I have always had to meet the challenges, more important than money or business, alone. I have had to decide by myself, and always against tremendous opposition from others. Every great move I have made in life has been ridiculed and opposed by my friends. The greatest winnings I have made, in happiness, in money or content, have been accomplished amid almost universal scorn. But I have reasoned in this way: The average man is not always successful. We meet few who attain their goal, few who are really happy or content. Then why should we let the majority rule in matters affecting our lives?

36. mica에 대한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하는 것은?

Mica is a cluster of interesting minerals, giving off water when heated. The word “mica” is derived from the Latin word micare, to glitter, in reference to the brilliant appearance of this mineral, especially when in small scales. It has the remarkable property of peeling into thin sheets which not only can be bent but also are elastic unless they have been carelessly broken. Thick crystals of mica are called books, as they resemble a volume having many leaves or pages. The several kinds of mica have different colors according to the variations in the chemical formula. White mica, which has the simplest composition, is colorless to silvery white with shiny surfaces. When magnesium and iron are present, mica is black. The mica is used in an electric iron because it is a poor conductor of electricity.

37. four-o'clock에 관한 다음 글의 내용과 일치하지 않는 것은?

Four-o'clocks were favorites with our grandmothers, just as they are admired by us today. The flowers remain closed until late afternoon, hence the name four-o'clock. During a season the plants produce hundreds of blooms, starting in late summer and continuing until being destroyed by frost. So with a few plants you can fill every bare space, say, between the house foundations and the pathway leading to the backyard. Usually, they self-sow. Otherwise sow the seeds in a row where they will grow as soon as danger from frost has passed. If its roots are dug and stored over winter, they produce plants of great size when set out in spring. Sometimes several colors of bloom are found on the same plant.

38. Investigations have found that library corners were among the least popular areas in childhood classrooms during free play periods. In most classrooms, the library corners consisted of a bookshelf with books put in a disorderly manner. Frequently the library area was inaccessible or hard to find. When found, these areas were unattractive and neglected. The work of creating an accessible library corner stocked with current selections of children's literature is worth the effort, because it is rewarded by children's increased interest in reading. It has been found that children in classrooms with extensive book collections use them fifty percent more when compared with classrooms where there were almost no books to be found.

39. Have you ever had a favorite author and found out later that author wrote books under a different name you knew nothing about? Pen names are an absolute necessity for authors who work in more than one genre. This is because readers of one type of book may be disappointed if they pick up a novel by their favorite author that is entirely different. For a writer who writes in only one genre or very similar genres, however, a pen name can actually be harmful. A pen name makes it far more difficult for readers to find the writer. If the genres an author writes in compliment each other, such as mystery and thriller, assuming a pen name will only cause him to lose half of his potential readership.

There are also traditional practices outlining what you should and should not do during an eclipse.

In Nepal, eclipses are traditionally considered bad luck and many people are already making preparations for any ill-effects that may accompany the longest total solar eclipse of this century. (①) In Kathmandu, popular TV astrology shows are reporting an increase in calls, with people asking whether the eclipse will mean years of bad luck and how to avoid it. (②) Basically, eating, drinking and sleeping are not advised. (③) Moreover, pregnant women are told to stay indoors just in case there's an adverse effect on their unborn child. (④) And hospitals have reported that would-be parents postponed scheduled caesarean operations, to ensure their children are not born under bad omens. (⑤) However, not everyone thinks this eclipse is bad news; one local airline is scheduled to fly over Mount Everest to ensure it gets the best view of the event.

41. Buildings—contrary to popular thought—are not lifeless objects. From the ruins of Byzantium to the streets of New York, from the roof of a Chinese pagoda to the Eiffel Tower, every building tells a story. Think of it: When we consider history, what we see before us are the buildings. If we look back to Rome, what we see first is the Colosseum and the Forum. Standing beside the temples of Greece or near the circle at Stonehenge, we feel the spirit of the people who created them; their spirits speak to us across the history. Great buildings, like great literature or poetry or music, can tell the story of the human soul.

42. In the 1950s, agricultural scientists around the world started a campaign known as the green revolution. It was an attempt to increase available food sources worldwide. The green revolution helped avoid famine in Asia and increased crop yields in many different parts of the world. However, the green revolution had its negative side, too. Fertilizers and pesticides are dangerous chemicals that cause cancer and pollute the environment. Also, the cost of the chemicals and the equipment to harvest more crops was far too expensive for an average peasant farmer. Consequently, owners of small farms received little benefit from the advances in agriculture. In some cases, farmers were forced off the land by larger agricultural businesses.

It is clear that TV activates an intrinsic response in the human brain. There is nothing particularly unhealthy with this response, but it can become problematic. Studies have been performed to determine how people respond to television both physiologically and behaviorally.

- (A) This is what makes some behavior addictive; it is very difficult to stop, and it takes control of people's lives. This definition seems to apply to television viewers.
- (B) These studies show that people feel relaxed, passive, and less alert while watching television. The feeling of relaxation ends immediately when the set is turned off. The feeling of passivity and the diminished level of alertness, however, persist.
- (C) As such, the action of turning on the set is positively reinforced with the positive feeling of relaxation, but turning the television off is unpleasant because the feeling of relaxation is removed while the other negative feelings persist.

Uranium is a resource in France because electricity is generated in nuclear power plants. However, uranium is not a resource to an isolated person living in the remote Highlands of Irian Jaya. In a similar way, a bicycle is a resource to an 8-year-old boy living in a city, but it would be of almost no use to a Highlander who lives in Irian Jaya. There steep narrow trails with sharp rocks, crossing creeks and climbing steep mountains, make using a bicycle impossible. Small sticks are a resource to Bushmen in South Africa. Mary and her husband Jim had a dog named "Lucky". Lucky was a real character. (a) Whatever struck his fancy, he would take it to his toy box in the basement. When something is missing, Mary or Jim would go to Lucky's toy box and there the treasure would be, amid all of Lucky's other favorite toys. (b) One day, Mary was diagnosed with having stomach cancer. She had an operation but she was just sure it was fatal and she was going to die of this disease.

(B)

From then on, Mary forgot about dying. Instead she and Lucky began living again, walking further and further together every day. It's been twelve years now and Mary finds herself cancer-free: no trace of cancer has sprung up again in her stomach. She thinks Lucky is her life saver. (c) Lucky—He still steals treasures and keeps them in his toy box. But Mary remains his greatest treasure.

(C)

When Mary woke for a second, she couldn't understand what was wrong. She couldn't move her head and her body felt heavy and hot. But panic soon gave way to laughter when Mary realized the problem. She was covered, literally blanketed, with every treasure Lucky owned! (d) While she had slept, the sorrowing dog had made trip after trip to the basement bringing his beloved mistress all his favorite things in life. He had covered her with his love.

(D)

While Mary was away for an operation, Lucky just drooped, whining and miserable. When Mary came home after spending two weeks in hospital, Mary was so exhausted she couldn't even make it up the steps to her bedroom. Jim made his wife comfortable on the couch and left her to nap. (e) Lucky stood watching her but he didn't come to her when she called. It made Mary sad but sleep soon overcame her and she dozed.

In 1986, the California raisin growers were expecting a huge harvest, yet they were beginning to panic. Year by year, (a) they had seen their sales dropping by one percent annually. In desperation they thought they needed to change people's feelings about raisins. For most people, raisins were considered lonely and dull. Dried-up fruits do not give the sensations that most people associate with feeling good about their lives. The task was clear: pump a healthy dose into the shriveled-up fruit. What can (b) they associate to raisins that would make people really want to buy them?

At the time, an old jazz song was enjoying a national popularity: "I Heard It Through the Grapevine." Raisin growers used the chance. (c) They hired innovative animators. Then (d) they created about thirty little clay raisin models for the farmers, each with a distinct personality, to dance to the old tune. In those moments, the New California Raisins were born. The first ad campaign of farmers created an instant sensation and successfully linked the sensations to what (e) they hoped for. As people watched the advertisement, they could link strong feelings of fun, humor, and pleasure to the once boring fruit. The raisin industry was rescued from its devastating slump in sales to a twenty percent annual increase.
